

STYLE NOTES: SAILING

Wet Behind the Ears

Those hankering for a taste of salt spray and America's Cup drama don't just have to live vicariously. It's surprisingly easy to get your sea legs—even in New York City. Financial types who work in Lower Manhattan can opt for the Manhattan Sailing School at North Cove, a tony marina in Battery Park City. Midtowners can take lessons at the Offshore Sailing School, which operates from Chelsea Piers. And for the uptown crowd, there's the Atlantic Yachting Association, at the 79th Street Boat Basin in Riverside Park. Anchors aweigh.

For more information on accredited sailing instruction in your area, see the American Sailing Association at www.asa.com.

Photo: Courtesy of Manhattan Sailing School

3 of 14

Also on Style.com

fashion shows / news & trends / people & parties / shopping / beauty / vogue / w